

This is a 3D printed model of a flower, designed to be assembled from individual parts. The model is shown in three different stages of assembly, demonstrating how the individual parts fit together to form the complete flower. The model is made of a white material, and the center of the flower is yellow. The model is shown in a way that highlights the intricate details of the petals and the central structure.